Qualifying For Registration

To qualify for and retain a registration as a gaming supplier employee, an applicant must be of good character and have suitable training and experience. SLGA determines if an applicant is of good character by reviewing aspects of his/her personal, financial and criminal history. To determine if an applicant has suitable training and experience, SLGA relies on the applicant's prospective employer to ensure that suitable training necessary to perform the job has been or will be provided. SLGA may also request additional information or, if necessary, interview the applicant, in order to verify that the qualification requirements are being met. SLGA may verify a person's qualifications at any time.

Suitability Factors

SLGA considers a number of factors in order to determine an applicant's suitability to be a gaming supplier employee. The main factors that SLGA considers are the existence of a criminal history, disclosed relevant information, failing to disclose relevant information, outstanding charges or warrants, and civil and bankruptcy claims. In all cases, SLGA will consider these factors in conjunction with the nature of the job they applied for.

Criminal History

The assessment of an applicant's criminal history is one of a number of critical factors in determining suitability. A criminal history is not the same as a criminal record. A criminal history includes criminal investigations, interviews, detentions, arrests as well as charges that may or may not have resulted in a conviction. Even if a person was found not guilty or if charges were dismissed or stayed, the charges still form part of an individual's criminal history. A criminal history also includes charges that were dealt with through an Alternative Measures Program or resulted in a suspended sentence, conditional or absolute discharge. A criminal history by itself does not disqualify someone from being registered. If an applicant has a criminal history, SLGA will consider the nature of the charge(s) or conviction(s), the circumstances of the offences, sentences imposed by the court, length of time since the last offence and evidence of rehabilitation or treatment.

SLGA may not process an application if the applicant has an outstanding warrant or charge that could potentially result in a denial of a registration. Warrants or charges may need to be cleared (fully resolved through the courts) before SLGA will make a determination of suitability. SLGA may also initiate an investigation or personal interview to determine suitability following the resolution in court.

All gaming supplier employee applicants who are not citizens or naturalized citizens of Canada and who reside outside of Canada must provide a Criminal Record Check from their local police agency. SLGA will accept any form prescribed and completed by the police agency or they can use the SLGA form titled Consent to a Criminal Record Check and submit that form to the police agency for completion. A copy of the SLGA form is attached to the back of this form. Fingerprint submissions are not required.

Failure to Disclose

Failing to disclose reflects negatively on a person's character, as it brings into question his/her honesty. SLGA may deny or cancel a registration if a person fails to disclose information relevant to the application or registration.

SLGA will conduct reviews of all registered gaming supplier employees as required. The review may include a new criminal record check. Therefore, it is important for gaming supplier employees to disclose any changes to their initial application that may impact their registration as soon as the changes occur. Although the circumstances of a new charge may not affect a gaming supplier employee's suitability, failure to disclose the information would be considered a breach of the terms and conditions and the gaming supplier employee could be subject to disciplinary action including, but not limited to, suspension or cancellation of the registration.

Civil and Bankruptcy Claims

SLGA must determine if the reason for the civil claim or bankruptcy may put the employer's assets and the integrity of gaming at risk.

Other Considerations

SLGA will also consider if an applicant or employee has displayed conduct that suggests a lack of good character; has provided false or misleading information; has a history of problem gambling, alcohol or drug abuse; has recently been denied a similar license in another jurisdiction; or has been found to be under the influence of alcohol or an illicit drug while working.
